Job search in a tight Labor Market – 5 key takeaways from the seminar

(Need to be completed in at least 100 words in order to get credit)

Attending this seminar, I learned about things I can do to land a job in a tight labor market.

- Learning new skills or sharpening my skills on my own time will greatly improve my ability to land a job in a tight labor market.
- In a tight labor market, I shouldn't limit my job search to only big tech companies. Many other companies outside of the tech industry also need tech workers.
- In a tight labor market, consider looking for jobs in other regions and states. There are many great opportunities out there and if I limit my job search to a specific region, I may miss out on a great job opportunity. Also, many employers offer fully remote positions so relocation may not be necessary.
- Preparing or practicing for interviews will help me successfully land a job.
- Consider pursuing a master's degree because it will make me stand out over those who only have bachelor's degrees.

How can this session be improved? (write in the space below)

This seminar was excellent. Rich presented us very valuable information that he has acquired throughout his life and career. All the information given was relevant and I have no doubt that this information will benefit us in our future job searches. I don't believe that this seminar needs improvement.
